

What is makenext.io about?

Problem statement

Different groups of people or smaller businesses need all kinds of things manufactured. This can range from prototypes to unique pieces for personal use or tiny to small production runs.

Right now they have a tough time finding people or companies to produce those items for them.

A first Google search will turn up results such as prototyping companies, manufacturers and maker spaces. The former might be too expensive, manufacturers usually don't produce prototypes and small quantities and maker spaces only supply the tooling for some form of usage fee.

Your best bet at this point is to put up a job ad in one of the maker spaces close by and screen the applications by hand, asking for reference work, etc.

Makers on the other hand face similar troubles if they want to make some money with their skills. They can post their resumes to job boards in their local maker space but chances of success are slim.

They might find gigs through sites such as angel.co for example, but your friendly neighbouring carpenter, who needs a CNC milled piece every now and then is probably not on there.

Mission

Makenext is the platform where people who need prototypes and tiny production runs manufactured find those who can.
